TO CANADA'S FIGHTING SERVICES

Today, more than six hundred thousand of the young men and women of Canada are poised upon the battle fronts of Democracy. They represent the flower of our youth and the hope of this Nation's future.

In the air, at sea, on the bullet-swept beaches of Dieppe, the war-torn hillsides of Hong Kong, Sicily, and in North Africa, some of them have met the enemy with honor to themselves and to the badges of Canada they wear as epaulettes.

For many more, in other lands and at home, it has been a time of weary vigil against the foe, and preparation for battle. To these men and to the women who serve in uniform with them, honor and gratitude are also due. For theirs, not less than the others, is the willingness to serve and, if necessary, to give their lives.

Twenty-five years ago, the fathers of these young men and women returned from another war in which they brought new lustre and meaning to the name of Canada and won for us the right of nationhood.

So, too, will these young men and women return with Victory in their knapsacks. For they are of the valiant breed, the unconquerable breed of Canada.
