Mount Robson, highest peak in the Canadian Rockies

The Wide and Wonderful West!

To the plainsman, Western Canada is a land of far horizons and wide prairie. From Lake-of-The-Woods to Alberta's foothills sprawl millions of acres of prairie flatland, where giant combines drone through golden wheat. Here, in this empire of wheat are the West's trademarks . . . solitary grain elevators clustered about a loading track . . . easy-going farmers and townsfolk whose emblem is the ten-gallon hat.

The West is also seen in the steep summits of the Canadian Rockies, mounting in mammoth grandeur along the Continental Divide. The gigantic sweep of great mountains is seen, too, in the western Selkirk and Coast Ranges, sloping along, peak after peak, for 600 miles to the Pacific Ocean.

This huge half continent is a realm of prairie and peaks . . . of woods, forests, lakes and streams. And its gateway is Winnipeg.

The scenic way west

Winnipeggers proudly claim that Portage Avenue is the widest downtown street in Canada. Their city is the provincial capital and the nation's fourth-largest metropolis. It is a railway, university, financial, commercial and industrial hub. And across the Red River is its twin, St. Boniface . . . the City of Churches.

Winnipeg has grown up since the days of the Fort Garry trading post and Red River cart. Today, Canadian National's hotel of distinction — The Fort Garry — bears this proud name. Winnipeg is a good starting point to see the West.

Go west by CNR, past the farmlands of waving wheat and bronzed grain to Saskatoon . . . prairie city of 70,000. Coursing through this community of neat homes and modern office buildings is the South Saskatchewan River, bearing vital water to fertile soil . . . like a prairie Nile. Saskatoon is a prosperous place, earning its living from the land. Typical of its relaxed way of life is the restful comfort of The Bessborough — a Canadian National hotel.

Bigger and more boisterous is Edmonton . . . capital of Alberta. This is Canada's oil centre and gateway to the booming northwest, where rich reservoirs of 'black gold' lay beneath the Leduc and Pembina oil fields. A multi-million dollar petrochemical industry flourishes on the city's outskirts. Thousands of new citizens settle here each year. Other thousands come to visit Edmonton. Many of these visitors stay at Canadian National's luxurious Macdonald Hotel.

A short, pleasant trip by CNR from here takes the traveller to Jasper National Park; outdoor playground of the Canadian Rockies. Heart of this vacationland is Jasper Park Lodge, owned and operated by the Canadian National system. From this holiday haven on the scenic shore of Lac Beauvert, guests go to marvel at the mountain beauty of Maligne Lake or to view the snowy splendor of Mount Edith Cavell. By snowmobile, they cross the glacial cap of the Columbia Icefield, which drains into three oceans. Tours to Jasper's many attractions are easily arranged and there's golfing, riding, tennis, swimming and fishing, too. If you're a camera fan . . . bring lots of film.

Westward by Canadian National is Mount Robson, Monarch of the Canadian Rockies. Thrill to the rugged beauty of Yellowhead Pass; the swirling waters of rushing rivers as they race through the steep Fraser and Thompson canyons. At journey's end is Vancouver . . . Canada's Pacific Coast metropolis of 665 thousand. Rising sharply against its skyline is the stately Hotel Vancouver. This port city is rich in travel attractions . . . Stanley Park, Grouse Mountain, Capilano Canyon, Lion's Gate Bridge . . . to name a few. Vancouver is British Columbia's commercial hub.

But Victoria is the capital . . . a city of lovely gardens, quaint shops and English ways. It's one more proof of the wonderful travel thrills in Canada's colorful West. Words cannot describe this great country . . . you must see it to believe it. Any CNR agent will give you more information. He will be glad to look after your travel arrangements, too.
