Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies

TRAIL Riding—inexpressibly enjoyable as it is—takes on an additional thrill when you are out to qualify for membership in that celebrated organization, the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies. And no wonder! For this is the real aristocracy of traildom, the only aristocracy that the skyhigh trails know, and the privilege of wearing one of the much-coveted little buttons of rank is the highest honour that the mountain country gives.

Three thousand miles of safe trails—and new trails being opened up each year—are yours for the travelling in the vicinity of Banff and Lake Louise. Bands of sure-footed mountain ponies are available at both these famous resorts. Ride where you like, at your own pace, amid the tumbled beauty of the snow-crowned peaks, sun-silvered glaciers, lakes like jewels, meadowed valleys, jade cathedral-dim forests. Return in time for luncheon, or go to one of the Bungalow Camps that lie scattered among the mountains. Ride away with an experienced guide on a Circle Trip. Join the Trail Riders on their Annual Ride and Pow-Wow. But whatever you do, don't forget your mileage!

Then, when you find you have covered fifty miles of trail, apply for membership in the Trail Riders, and shortly after you will receive the artistic bronze button. When you have ridden 100 miles, the silver button is yours, and you will be a Trail Rider for the rest of your days! Nothing is more inevitable. Your ambitions soar upwards to the gold button, given for 500 miles. Immediately you have it, you are eager for the time when you can wear the gold, enamel-border button of the 1,000-mile Riders. That won't satisfy you, for still to be gained is the button worn by initiates of the inner circle, the beautiful full-colour enamel button for those who have ridden 2,500 miles. By this time, so completely have the beauty and mystery of the Rockies engulfed you, you will begrudge the months you must be away from the magic trails.
