Katy's Cove

St. Andrews by-the-sea, N.B.

King Canute should have staged his famous demonstration at Katy's Cove, private bathing beach for guests at The Algonquin, famous Canadian Pacific summer resort at St. Andrews by-the-sea, New Brunswick. The moral would have been different, but Canute's prestige with his courtiers would have risen because the tide at Katy's Cove obeys the command of man.

The explanation is simple. The Cove is dammed at its mouth by a causeway carrying the right of way for Canadian Pacific trains to St. Andrews by-the-sea and the inflow of water is controlled by gates to maintain a standard level, sun-warmed to a pleasant temperature for the comfort of bathers. The local "Canute" maintains the "freshness" of the sea water by permitting ebb and flow in the night hours. All this is the more remarkable because St. Andrews by-the-sea is located on Passamaquoddy Bay, an inlet of the Bay of Fundy, famous for the highest tides in the world.
