Empress of Britain

The newest addition to the Canadian Pacific fleet of White Empresses, the 26,000-ton streamlined white beauty, Empress of Britain, launched in June 1955 by Her Majesty The Queen, revives a name glorious in the annals of transatlantic travel.

Modern as the finest skills of the Clyde's famous ship workers could make her, the streamlined, air-conditioned new Empress from her single aluminum funnel to the swimming pool on "D" Deck is as new as tomorrow. Special features of the 640-foot-long, 85-foot-wide flagship of the Canadian Pacific fleet include the newest sea travel amenity, stabilizers. The sweeping curves of her gleaming white superstructure are balanced aft by decks in echelon to provide more deck space for passengers. Glass-enclosed, temperature-controlled promenades, a plenitude of First Class and Tourist Class public rooms, two magnificent restaurants, a cinema, the brilliantly decorated Empress Room, libraries, writing rooms and children's playrooms promise carefree voyaging.

In 1957 transatlantic travellers between Canada and Europe will welcome a sister ship—Empress of England.
