LEAVING RESTAURANT

The sleek, conventional lines of the Canadian Pacific black and white, buff-funnelled "Princess" coastal vessels are well known to West Coast visitors from all parts of the world.

Of the fleet of six popular vessels serving the State of Washington, at Seattle, and up and down the British Columbia Coast line to Alaska, the Princess "Patricia", "Marguerite", "Nanaimo" and "Vancouver" are the latest additions. They provide fast, reliable, scheduled service. Their interior appointments and accommodations compare with some of the world's finest ocean cruise vessels.

The "Princess Patricia" and "Princess Marguerite" are twin, turbo-electric vessels, built to Canadian Pacific specifications at Glasgow, Scotland.

The names of the stylish vessels perpetuate the memory of earlier ships of the fleet.

The first "Princess Patricia" was once a "Fast Flyer" plying the Strait of Georgia from Vancouver to Nanaimo, B.C., and the original "Princess Marguerite" was torpedoed and sunk during the last war in the Mediterranean while operating as a troop ship for the British admiralty.

The "Princess of Nanaimo", which came to the West Coast of Canada in 1951, also from Glasgow, Scotland, is a specially-designed vessel, equipped with double automobile decks and accommodation for 1750 day-time passengers. This fine ship operates on a fast daily schedule, shuttling over the busy 36-mile sea lane between downtown Vancouver and Nanaimo, and provides an important link between the West Coast mainland and the holiday and tourist attractions of Vancouver Island.
