About your trip to

MEXICO

BEFORE YOU LEAVE... A passport isn't necessary for American citizens; just purchase a Tourist Card, costing $3.00 which is good for one trip and six full months in Mexican territory, but if you intend to cross the border several times within that period, you can obtain, for $5.00, a Tourist Card which will permit you to do so. Ask your nearest Mexican Consul for either one. Smart travelers travel light, and you'll enjoy a far more carefree holiday if your baggage requirements are held to a convenient minimum. For most trips, one wardrobe-type suitcase and a small over-night bag are plenty—your time will be devoted to enjoying Mexico's delightful scenery, and not to counting parcels! Mexico's splendid all-year climate makes no demands for special clothing. Informality is the rule, and the ever sunny weather, like the best of fall days, means that sport clothes, comfortable walking shoes and a topcoat for evenings are in order. If you will spend much of your time in the lower country, at Taxco, Cuernavaca, Uruapan or Oaxaca, a lighter wardrobe is desirable, and if you're going to the tropics at Acapulco or Veracruz, bring summer clothing—and a bathing suit!

ON THE WAY TO MEXICO... Your trip will be vastly more worthwhile and interesting if you know something of Mexico before you cross the border, so why not brush up on your history, your legends, your Spanish and your geography as you relax in the comfort of the air-conditioned Pullman?

There are dozens of splendid books on Mexico, suggesting interesting towns to visit, describing its many Indian crafts, giving you a broad outline of the country which you yourself will fill in with personally-discovered details.

AT THE BORDER... As your train crosses the border and continues on toward Mexico City, courteous customs officials will inspect your tourist card and baggage. Entering Mexico, you may bring with you any reasonable amount of personal clothing and jewelry, fifteen packages of cigarettes and twenty-five cigars, together with a camera or similar articles for your own use. Returning to the States, these same personal effects are duty-free, together with one hundred dollars worth of merchandise bought as souvenirs or personal gifts, which may include one hundred cigars and any reasonable amount of cigarettes.

WHEN YOU'RE IN MEXICO... Your American dollar still goes further than in the United States and the peso maintains its ratio of 12.50 to the dollar. The denominations are practically identical. Centavos correspond to cents and the peso equals 100 centavos. Travelers' cheques are accepted anywhere. The best plan is to exchange only enough money at the border to suffice until one reaches his destination where the rates of exchange are likely to be more favorable. You will be surprised agreeably to discover how much your American dollar can buy in Mexico.

WHEN IN DOUBT... If you want helpful suggestions about a side trip into the byways of Mexico, if you are undecided about a hotel—in fact, if we can be of any service to you, why not drop in at the National Railways of Mexico office at Bolivar 19, Mexico City? We'll be glad to help you!

SOUTHERN ACCENT

Though English, of course, is spoken in almost every large town in Mexico, it's fun to try out your Spanish. You will soon discover that place names are often tongue-twisters, for they frequently derive from Indian dialects; a good rule to remember is that the accent in Spanish generally comes on the last syllable if the word ends in a consonant, and on the next-to-last if ending in a vowel, exceptions being noted by an accent mark.

Mexico City

HIGH on the great central plateau of Mexico, hemmed in by giant mountain ranges whose snow-capped peaks are sharply etched against the deep blue sky, Mexico City welcomes the traveller at every season. A city of exciting contrasts, of age-old traditions and historic monuments, yet modern just the same—a gloriously beautiful city of splendid avenues, of tree-filled parks, of fine old Spanish churches and inviting markets. A city of interesting peoples—of Spanish families, of modern Mexicans, of sturdy Indians, all of them living the carefree life of relaxation inspired by this land of eternal sunshine.

Long ago the Aztecs came here, following the Empires of the Mayas and the Toltecs; each of these great races contributed to Mexico's heritage—awe-inspiring monuments and temples, music and dance themes, ornaments and idols, craft traditions still copied faithfully by the artisans of today. In 1519 the Spaniards landed at Veracruz, bringing the culture and religion of the Old World with them; soon they had conquered all of Mexico, building their stunning Spanish-Baroque cathedrals, creating the fine palatial mansions whose wrought-iron grills, colorful patios and carved-stone doorways stand as a monument to their craftsmanship. Nowhere will you feel the impact of one civilization on another more than in Mexico City; nowhere will you better appreciate the intermingling of two great cultures.

MEXICO IN FALL AND WINTER

As skies grow gray with threats of snow and the birds gather in flocks preparatory to flight to warmer climates, how natural it is to plan a trip to Mexico where the law of opposites operates to carry so much appeal. So foreign, yet removed by hours only, this land of warm welcome beckons irresistibly to sunshine and sweetly scented scenes. There out of doors life flows gently; other customs; new sensations.

Although, strictly speaking, there are no seasons in Mexico, so far as healthfulness and recreational opportunities are concerned, and travelers' opinions differ in the matter of the best time for a visit south of the border, probably the fall and winter deserve a shade of preference. The rains end in September and leave the landscape clothed in fresh verdure, the cool clear air has an extra tonic quality and new vigor is apparent in the people and country alike.
