

A typical scene along the line of the Baltimore and Ohio in pre-Civil War days and those immediately thereafter. The engine represents one of the most colorful types—the "Dutch Wagons"—used on the Baltimore and Ohio. The first four of them were built in the railroad shops at Mount Clare in 1852. This is the eighth of a series of paintings in full color done by Herbert D. Stitt for the Baltimore and Ohio Magazine during the Centenary Year of the railroad

POST CARD

PLACE
ONE CENT
STAMP
HERE

For Address Only

M
A
D
E
I
N
U
S
A
