

"Rivals" is the seventh of a series of pictures in full color which the artist, Herbert D. Stitt, has painted for the covers of the Baltimore and Ohio Magazine during the Centenary Year of our railroad. They illustrate some of the more important events in Baltimore and Ohio history. "Rivals" portrays a characteristic scene developing from the competition between America's First Railroad and the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal and the frightening of the canal boat horses by the strange, steaming creation on the railroad track
