Harnessing the Electron

FOR FASTER, SAFER RAIL TRAVEL

YESTERDAY, electronics was the dream of science. Today, it directs the fire of big naval guns, detects the presence of enemy aircraft, and treats diseases hitherto considered incurable. Tomorrow, the power of the mighty electron may aid in bringing more speed, increased safety to rail travel.

Even now, some of America's outstanding scientists are exploring the use of electronics in railroading. Studies and experiments for the Baltimore & Ohio, for example, are being made to determine the applications of electronics in radio communication between stations and trains and between train crews—all with an eye to increasing post-war speed and safety.

The "harnessing of the electron" is one of the many projects currently being undertaken by the Baltimore & Ohio so that it may bring to its post-war customers the finest in rail service.
