"There are strange things done in the Midnight Sun"

And you should see them all

There was a time when the trip to Alaska was open to two classes of people only—gold owners and gold hunters. It was an extravagantly expensive trip.

But all that has changed. Now it is just a pleasure trip from Seattle, or Vancouver, by palatial ocean liners.

This summer you can make the eleven-day round trip from Seattle (or Vancouver) to Skagway for only $80.00. The twelve-day trip to Seward for only $115.00. And you are missing something you will always regret if you fail to see this country where Nature has done everything on a gigantic scale.

And if you look at a map of the Canadian and Alaskan Coast, all the way up you will see overlapping islands which form a protected "inside passage." This is the secret of the smooth and fascinating voyage toward the Midnight Sun.

All the way, going and returning, you see things worth seeing—great mountains, magnificent forests, Indian villages, a rare variety of totem poles, fishing settlements, strange outpost cities, exotic flowers, and huge old glaciers.

The voyage is one continual round of pleasure . . . deck sports and dancing, fair weather and long summer days, a moving panorama of natural beauty and quaint ports of call.

You will enjoy seeing Ketchikan, Wrangel, Petersburg, Taku Glacier. You will find Juneau a thriving city, at Skagway you take the White Pass and Yukon Railroad for a trip to the interior of Southeast Alaska. Sitka was Alaska's capitol during Russian days. You will thrill over Cordova, Columbia Glacier, Valdez and Seward, where you take the Alaska Railroad to Mt. McKinley National Park and Fairbanks, famous in song and story.

Reservations and arrangements for your trip to Alaska can be made at any Great Northern travel office or write to A. J. Dickinson, P. T. M., Great Northern Railway Building, St. Paul, Minnesota.
