

FIFTY-FIVE miles by auto road from the Glacier Park Hotel is the Many Glacier Hotel, located in the heart of the mountain world. This hotel is built of native stone and timber hewed and sawed from the adjacent forest of spruce and balsams. From the hotel's rustic verandas one may glimpse nearly all of those scenic attractions which make up Glacier's charm. Here the guests may enjoy the many and varied hiking and horseback trips or spend their time fishing, boating or just resting and loafing.

Many Glacier is a focal point and from it in all directions radiate trails which penetrate into the mountains leading to new scenic delights. Among the many interesting side trips that can be made from Many Glacier are—

Iceberg Lake, a pocket edition of a polar sea. This little turquoise lake, covering perhaps 100 acres, is backed up with a head wall 3,000 feet above the surface of the water and is never free from icebergs.

Cracker Lake, seven miles in the opposite direction from Many Glacier Hotel, is another delightful trip. The Cracker Lake trail follows Canyon Creek to its source in Cracker Lake at the head of the canyon formed by the high walls of Mt. Allen and Siyeh Mountain.

Grinnell, Josephine and McDermott form a chain of glacier-fed lakes. The trail skirts the edges of the lakes and the four and one half miles from the hotel to the upper or Grinnell Lake is a delightful walk or ride. Josephine Lake has a beautiful, wide gravel beach a mile along the east shore and this is a favorite picnic place for hikers, riders and fishermen. It is only one half hour's walk from the hotel.

Grinnell Glacier offers the best field for the exploration and study of a glacier of any in this region.

Only seven miles by trail, it furnishes thrills that cannot be experienced any other place.

Up the gentle slope of Altyn Mountain is a path for hikers that winds its way back and forth on the rock shelves, following easy grades to the summit from which there is a marvelous view.

Another scenic trip is to Ptarmigan Wall, the last mile of which is mostly up the steep wall back of Ptarmigan Lake, and must be negotiated on foot.

Piegan Pass trail winds along the west side of Mt. Allen. The trip from Many Glacier Hotel to Morning Eagle Falls and return is recommended to those who do not care for the higher altitudes.

THE Glacier Park Hotel, visited the first day, at the eastern gateway to Glacier National Park is a vast timbered structure nearly as large as the capitol at Washington, breathing the spirit of the great outdoors and harmonizing perfectly with its forested and mountainous background.

On the grounds east of the hotel a new and sporty golf course, well trapped and with grass greens, awaits the enthusiast. Many short hiking or riding trips can be made from here and an Indian camp is located nearby.

TWO Medicine, visited the first day, was once the favorite haunt of the picturesque Blackfeet Indians. Here they gathered to perform their religious ceremonies and "make medicine." It is easily and quickly reached from the entrance hotel, and provides a fitting introduction to the Park's scenic splendors. Two Medicine is particularly scenic; Mount Rockwell lifting its pyramid like peak more than 4,000 feet above the water. The chalets are tucked away amid the serried peaks on the shore of Two Medicine Lake, commanding an exquisite panorama of mountain scenery. The Two Medicine Valley excels in beauty of mountain grouping with a chain of three beautiful mountain lakes at varying altitudes combined with a score of surrounding peaks.

THE chalets of Going-to-the-Sun, visited the third day, are perched on a rocky promontory extending into the blue waters of St. Mary Lake. To the rear, high above the chalets, towers the peak from whence they derive their name, while all about are the jumbled masses of scores of other Rocky Mountain giants. The stupendous scenery at the head of St. Mary Lake forms a thrilling climax to all that has gone before. Going-to-the-Sun chalets are connected with St. Mary chalets at the lower end of the lake by the launch St. Mary and with Many Glacier Hotel by a horseback trail over Piegan Pass.
