Northern Pacific Railway

The Land of Big Ideas

ALEXANDER HAMILTON said:

"Try to think continentally."

For most of us it requires a journey on a transcontinental railroad to bring full appreciation of Hamilton's advice. It is essential to see how big the country is in order to think with it.

As one travels today through the Great Northwest it is amazing to realize that only a half century ago no railroads spanned these plains and mountains, no large cities prospered in the valleys—the Northwest was an untamed and sparsely inhabited wilderness.

Then came the Northern Pacific Railway—the pioneer! Lands were occupied, towns and cities sprang up along its lines, mines were developed, industries were built, forests and rivers were put to human uses.

Today the "Northern Pacific Country" is a land of Big Ideas—big farms, big ranches, big cities, big industries, big mountains, big orchards, big rivers, big hearts, big people.

Travel in the Big Northwest to catch its inspiration. Perhaps you will want to find a home there. Certainly you will enjoy your journey. The Big Idea of the Northern Pacific is to help you.

“First of the Northern Transcontinentals”

Below is given the date of completion of each of the seven railroads built across the continent to the North Pacific Coast—

Northern Pacific, September 8, 1883

Union Pacific (in connection with O. S. L. and O. W. R. & N.) November 25, 1884

Canadian Pacific November 7, 1885

Great Northern January 5, 1893

Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific
May 14, 1909

Grand Trunk Pacific (now Canadian National) April 7, 1914

Canadian Northern (now Canadian National) January 23, 1915

That primacy which the Northern Pacific holds as regards the date of its completion, it aims to hold and to maintain as regards the character and quality of its freight and passenger service.
