

Now is the time to get out the old fishing rod, and seek the quiet of some deep pool where the elusive trout are waiting to be snared.

And as an after-thought—don't forget to bring along your camera,

Now You Tell One

so that while you are wrestling with one of the tough ones, your wife may be snapping pictures of the catch so that you will have future proof to show doubting neighbors that all of the big ones did not get away.

P. S. And where to go? Why, to a dude ranch in Wyoming or Montana, of course.

NORTHERN PACIFIC OFFICES ARE HEADQUARTERS FOR RANCH INFORMATION

Serving the Ranch Country

Almost daily during the summer season, the NORTH COAST LIMITED, Northern Pacific's famous transcontinental train, is a veritable "Dude Ranch Special" carrying "Dudes" to and from ranches in Montana and Wyoming. Observation-club and dining cars are air-conditioned.
