The Watchtower at Desert View

is the climax of the famous Grand Canyon Rim Drive, which should not be missed by any visitor. Of all the incredible vistas studing the 32-mile scenic highway, Desert View is considered the finest. Located at the terminus of the West Rim Drive on the highest point of the South Rim, the Watchtower commands a spectacular view of the Canyon, the Colorado River, and of deserts, forests and mountains—a “magic circle” equaled by no other sight on earth.

GRAND CANYON NATIONAL PARK

in Arizona encompasses one of the world's greatest natural wonders—the titanic canyon for which it is named.

Cut by the turbulent Colorado River during millions of years, the Grand Canyon of today is 217 miles long, 4 to 18 miles wide, and a mile deep. Rising from its depths are whole ranges of mountains, ridges and intermediate plateaus slashed by hundreds of side canyons only slightly less incredible than the main gorge. Over the rock temples and majestic walls spreads a sea of ever-changing colors, ranging from the blue and purple shades of early morning and late evening to the brilliant yellow and vermilion hues of the noonday glare.

The South Rim of the Grand Canyon is easily reached by the Santa Fe Railway, or by automobile over Arizona Highway 64 branching off U. S. Highways 66 and 89.

Of the many activities and sightseeing trips offered to Grand Canyon visitors, the Grand Canyon Rim Drives provide the best opportunity to see much of the Canyon in a short time. An even more thrilling inspiration is an inner-canyon trip on muleback, an adventure no able-bodied visitor should miss.

All hotels and facilities on the South Rim are open throughout the year, and motor and trail trips are operated on a year-round schedule.
