

Kachina Doll

LUNCHEON

April 3, 1962

Consomme Royale

Filets of Gray Sole Saute Anglaise

Grilled Salisbury Steak, Sauce Champignon

Baked Sugar Cured Ham, Pineapple Sauce

COLD: Assorted Meats with Potato Salad

Lyonnaisse Potatoes - Puree of Fresh Spinach

Lettuce with Blue Cheese Dressing

Ice Cream - Apple Pie - Layer Cake

Preserved Peaches - Wild Blackberry Sundae

Choice of Cheese

Beverage

Luncheon $2.25

THE MOBILGAS 1962 ECONOMY RUN SPECIAL

Los Angeles to Detroit, Michigan, and Return

The Hopi Indians believe that the Kachina is a supernatural being who is impersonated by a man wearing a mask. The Kachinas are similar to Christian saints and are supposed to carry prayers to the Hopi gods that live on the San Francisco Peaks of Arizona and other high mountains.

Hopi children believe in Kachinas just as many children do in Santa Claus; and as Santa Claus comes at a certain season bearing gifts, so certain Kachinas bring Kachina dolls which are small representations of the supernatural beings.

The dolls are hand-carved from dry cottonwood roots and painted in bright colors. There are about 200 different classifications of Kachina dolls and for many years they have been treasured items of Indian lore.

Kachina Doll, by E. I. Couse, N.A., is from the Santa Fe Railway collection of paintings featuring Indians of the Southwest.