

Autumn aspens turn the mountainsides of New Mexico and Arizona to gold during the fall season of the year.

The aspen is one of the most graceful trees in the Southwest and thrives in the upper mountain areas.

When the first warmth of summer penetrates the mountains, the aspen presents a tender green leaf that turns greener in the summer. With the first chill of autumn the leaves lose their green and turn a golden yellow and brown.

Autumn Aspens, by Freemont Ellis, reproduced on the cover of this menu, is from the Santa Fe collection of famous paintings of the Southwest.
