

This view of Fremont Street, Las Vegas, Nevada, greets Union Pacific patrons on arriving at this world-famous desert resort city.

Mother Nature laid out the geographical and natural advantages that have made Las Vegas a rendezvous for travelers to and from California since the covered wagon days. Man has added those vacation and resort features which attract more than ten million visitors a year.

Along Fremont Street, where casinos never close, are also fine shops, department stores, theatres, restaurants and offices.

A few miles south begins Las Vegas' fabulous "Strip" with its multi-million dollar resort hotels interspersed with modern shops and other business. Here perform nightly more international stars of stage, radio, TV and even Opera than in any other one place in the world. In fact, Las Vegas is often called the "Entertainment Capital of the World." Adjacent to "The Strip" a multi-million dollar Convention Center brings many national conventions to Las Vegas.

There are few, if any, areas in the world which offer the range of features found in and around Las Vegas, including mighty Hoover (Boulder) Dam, Lake Mead, the Valley of Fire, the towering Charleston Mountains, the spectacular resort industry—all in the invigorating climate and setting of the desert where the sun shines 99 days out of a hundred.

Fremont Street, Las Vegas, Nevada, main stem of the ultra-modern "Casino Center" area where doors never close, as seen from Union Pacific station.
