

Portland's ideal location at the head of the prosperous Willamette Valley is probably one of the cogent reasons for its rapid growth to a city of 424,000 people. The City's western hills are lined with strikingly beautiful homes. Views to the north and east overlooking the city present inspiring scenes climaxed in the rugged, snow-mantled peaks of Mt. Hood, Mt. St. Helens and Mt. Adams.

Portland is a city of spacious city parks and playgrounds, presently embracing 2,260 acres, with an additional 2,500 acres soon to be developed. The park properties include three municipal golf courses. Altogether there are 101 parks, large and small, and their location is such that every section of the city is provided with neighborhood parks facilities.

Portland's matchless harbor shelters ships of all nations, and here they take on cargoes of lumber, textiles, wheat, wool, fruit and flour.

The Oregon Coast presents countless opportunities for surf-bathing, hiking, bicycling, horseback riding, clamming, agate hunting and splendid fishing. Deep-sea fishing off the Oregon Coast is a favorite sport with many.

"For you a rose in Portland grows" is the Rose City's welcome to the world. It is not an empty boast, as Portland's yards and porches all have their bush roses and scarlet ramblers. The colorful Rose Festival, held in June each year, turns the city into a fairyland of rose-decked and sweet-scented beauty, drawing throngs of visitors.
