

Perhaps no other city in the world is so flower conscious as San Francisco. The universal and irresistible appeal of flowers is exemplified by the constant demand from San Franciscans and visitors for more and more blooms. Carnations, chrysanthemums, daisies, roses, and a myriad of other flowers, all of generous proportions and arrayed in all the gorgeous and dazzling hues of the rainbow, may be purchased inexpensively on any day of the year.

But, the dramatic charm of San Francisco is more than flowers, or bridges, or cable cars, or cosmopolitan restaurants, or Chinatown, or any one of the thousand-and-one attractions which make the City unique and outstanding above all others. It is something far more subtle than any of these. One cannot walk the streets of San Francisco without recalling the colorful history of the place—the romance and excitement of gold rush days; the disputes and bitterness during the Civil War attendant upon the decision as to whether or not California would support the Union or set itself up as the Pacific Republic; the bawdy Barbary Coast and its fabulous habits; the disastrous fire of 1906, and the courage and resourcefulness of those who set about to rebuild.

This mental mingling of the past with the present is experienced by everyone who visits San Francisco. It is something that gets in the blood and gives San Francisco a powerful hold on all who have been exposed to the charm of this mighty metropolis at the Golden Gate.

Contributing in no small way to the inimitable charm that is San Francisco's, are the numerous flower stalls and sidewalk stands.
