VIEW FROM COMANCHE TRAIL, IN BRYCE CANYON NATIONAL PARK, UTAH

Bryce Canyon National Park

BRYCE CANYON, about ninety miles east of Cedar City, Utah, in the National Park of the same name, is probably the most astonishing blend of exquisite beauty and grotesque grandeur that the forces of erosion have ever produced. Bryce is in reality a giant amphitheatre or basin, approximately two miles wide, about three miles long and 1,000 feet deep. Its rim is 8,000 feet above sea level. The softer parts of the high plateau have been etched away leaving an endless array of towers, spires, statues, minarets, fortresses, pagodas, castles and cathedrals standing in indescribably weird formation—a ruined Oriental city overspread by gorgeous color. A brilliant watermelon-pink predominates, with alternate strata of deep yellows and white, together with many tones of red, orange, buff and purple. At first view the eye is fairly staggered by the imposing monuments, both singly and in groups, that adorn the sides and bottom of the canyon. Moreover, the play of sunlight and shadow upon the huge iridescent bowl of lace and filigree work in stone constantly changes the colors, and sometimes seems to give animation to realistic images.

Near the rim of Bryce Canyon is an attractive rustic Union Pacific Lodge Center, and in the pines near by are the cozy guest lodges, including some of deluxe type. Excellent scenic motorways connect Bryce Canyon with Cedar Breaks National Monument, another marvelously eroded and tinted basin, and with Zion National Park, Kaibab National Forest and Grand Canyon National Park, all reached by 6-day tours in comfortable Union Pacific motor-buses operating regularly out of Cedar City, Utah, the gateway, during the season, June 1 to September 20. This gateway is reached daily by the fine fast service of the Union Pacific. Side trips enroute Yellowstone Park or the Pacific Coast via Union Pacific may be made from Ogden, Salt Lake City or Lund, Utah.
