

Some of the Grotesque Formations Seen From Within Bryce Canyon

Bryce Canyon National Park

BRYCE CANYON, which gave the National Park its name, is probably the most astonishing blend of exquisite beauty and grotesque grandeur that the forces of erosion have ever produced. It is in reality a giant amphitheatre or basin, approximately two miles wide, about three miles long and 1,000 feet deep. Its rim is 8,000 feet above sea level. The softer parts of the high plateau have been etched away leaving an endless array of towers, spires, statues, minarets, pagodas, castles and cathedrals standing in indescribably weird formation and overspread by gorgeous color. A watermelon-pink predominates, with alternate strata of deep yellows and white, together with many tones of red, orange, buff and purple. Moreover, the play of sunlight and shadow constantly changes the colors, and sometimes seems to give animation to realistic images.

Near the rim of Bryce Canyon is an attractive rustic Union Pacific Lodge Center, and in the pines near by are the cozy guest lodges, including some of de luxe type. Scenic motorways connect Bryce Canyon with Cedar Breaks National Monument, another marvelously eroded and tinted basin, and with Zion National Park, Kaibab National Forest and Grand Canyon National Park, all reached by 6-day tours in comfortable Union Pacific motor-buses operating regularly out of Cedar City, Utah, the gateway, during the season, June 1 to September 20. This gateway is reached daily by the fine fast service of the Union Pacific.
