

When the Territorial Legislature established the University of Idaho in 1889, the campus was a barren wheat field. Today the 1,100 acre campus is dotted with thousands of trees and shrubs, surrounding more than a hundred attractive buildings. It is one of the most beautiful college sites in the country.

It enjoys the highest possible accreditation for an institution of its type. It has produced more Rhodes Scholars than any institution west of the State of Michigan, and is nationally famed in such fields as agriculture, forestry, mining and home economics. The University is one of the few institutions in the West offering reserve officers training in all three of the major branches of the armed services—army, navy and air.

The student body of 3,500 to 4,000 is large enough to justify a well-rounded program in all fields and yet not so large that the all-important personal relationship between student and instructor is lost.

At the University of Idaho every student has an opportunity to take part in a health-developing program. More than two-thirds of the students actively participate in intramural sports. An excellent student-owned golf course is adjacent to the campus and a ski run will be found on Moscow Mountain, just a few miles from town. In intercollegiate competition, Idaho is a member of the Pacific Coast Conference.
