

One of the most ideally situated colleges in the country is the University of Colorado, within sight of vast and colorful ranges of the Rocky Mountains. The 160-acre campus, on the southern edge of the modern and beautiful city of Boulder, embraces most of the departments of the University, although the School of Medicine and the School of Nursing, combined with the Colorado General Hospital and the Colorado Psychopathic Hospital are in Denver. Degrees in the arts and sciences, engineering, medicine, pharmacy, music, law, and business are granted.

The green-carpeted and tree-dotted campus makes a fitting foil for the newer red-tile roof buildings constructed of local sandstone quarried from university-owned property. It has a rich variety of tone and color, ranging from yellow to reddish-purple. Buildings are distinctive in their style of architecture, based upon the Italian rural mode. Also on the campus is a modern stadium seating 26,000.

Created by the state legislature in 1861, the first class of seven was graduated in 1883. Today the university has an enrollment of 10,000 students, who work hard and play hard in the ideal climate of its 5,000 foot elevation. There are ample opportunities for healthful, outdoor recreation, as only a few miles from the campus lie Roosevelt National Forest, Arapaho National Forest and Rocky Mountain National Park, vast regions of primitive mountain beauty.

While keeping pace with the leaders in higher education, the University of Colorado is also serving the citizens of that great state in a practical manner. Its influence in a social and cultural way is felt throughout Colorado, and its significant contributions to science and industry, through a broad research program, are too numerous to bear reciting.
