

Montana State University is one of the four original units of Montana's higher educational system. It was chartered by the Third Legislative Assembly as the University of Montana on February 17, 1893. During the same month the Montana State Agricultural College, the Montana State School of Mines, and the Montana State Normal College were authorized. The Assembly located the institutions at Missoula, Bozeman, Butte and Dillon respectively. The institution located at Missoula became known as the State University of Montana until 1935 when it was designated "Montana State University" by legislative act. Other component institutions of the present University of Montana are Eastern Montana State Normal School at Billings and Northern Montana College at Havre.

The various departments within the University's College of Arts and Sciences, and the seven professional schools offer some 25 different major courses of study, constituting preparation for a large variety of vocations. The University is fully accredited by the Northwest Association of Secondary and Higher Schools, and, on a national level, by the Association of American Universities.

With a present enrollment of over 4,000 students, Montana State University has definite plans for expansion of its physical plant in the near future. Its 125-acre campus lies at the foot of Mt. Sentinel which rises to an elevation of 2,000 feet above the campus floor. The surrounding country is a region of beautiful mountain ranges, easily accessible and furnishing excellent opportunity for recreation.
