

Colorado's State Capitol, which stands just outside the bustle and din of downtown Denver traffic, is a favorite place for tourists to visit. Thousands of vacation snapshot albums throughout the country contain one or more views of this famous structure. Completed in 1896 at a cost of $2,800,000, this massive three-story building of native Colorado granite, is surmounted by a dome on which gold leaf has been laid over a lead base. Floodlighted by night, the dome serves as a landmark that can be seen for miles out of Denver. An outside balcony at the base of the dome is open to visitors and here may be obtained a splendid view of Denver and the neighboring mountains.

Just across the street from the State Capitol is the State Museum Building, headquarters of the State Historical Society. On the main floor is a very complete display of relics of Pueblo life and culture. A library of western historical volumes and documents; a mineralogical and geological exhibit, and many interesting articles associated with the building of the West round out this very comprehensive collection.

Colorado's imposing State Capitol stands on a slightly eminence in Denver, overlooking the beautiful Civic Center.
