

*L*ong before winter blizzards sweep down upon our cities and farms, early autumn snowfalls leave a soft blanket of white upon the slopes of the Colorado Rockies.

In early fall, the mountain forests glow with the gold of the quivering aspen. Shrubs and grasses put on their winter dress. From high alpine meadows the elk and deer come down into the valleys. All the forest world seems to glisten with life.

Some folks say an autumn visit in Colorado is the most beautiful experience they know. Coloradoans, too, look forward eagerly to this season.

Many resorts in the Colorado Rockies welcome guests in the fall. Union Pacific Streamliners serve Colorado from both the East and the West, stopping at cities close to the mountains. Denver, the "Queen City of the Rockies," is the gateway to this enchanting area, and is the western terminus of the luxurious new Streamliner "City of Denver."
