GLACIER PARK

Land of Shining Mountains

Sheer and sharp as the pyramids, the great snow-capped peaks of the Montana Rockies rear their majestic heads up to the sky, forming a mighty granite barrier. Here the Continental Divide becomes a rock-hewn reality and the "backbone" of Glacier National Park, for the barrier extends down from the Canadian border through the entire length of the Park.

This is the "Land of Shining Mountains," named by the Blackfoot Indians. It is a land of pagan gods and wary mountain goats, of living ice sheets moving slowly down from the heights of monster peaks and chasms and countless waterfalls. There are over 250 lakes of unbelievable charm, and roaring rivers of ice-blue water to feed them. There are no foothills . . . the mountains rise with amazing abruptness from the forested valleys and lake shores to form a playground that for ruggedness and sheer mountain grandeur in many ways surpasses even the craggy Alps.

See Glacier Park this summer and learn to live again! For best travel value "Go Burlington" via either of three great scenic routes. Travel via St. Paul-Minneapolis, the shortest, most direct route — or by way of Colorado — or alongside the Black Hills of South Dakota and the Big Horn Mountains. Actually, from the eastern part of the country you can include Glacier, Yellowstone and Colorado in one round-trip ticket at surprisingly low cost.
