

B U R L I N G T O N

Breakfast

The Burlington serves the Dude Ranch Country of Wyoming, Montana and Colorado

Special Menu for

SYRIA TEMPLE

A. A. O. N. M. S.

OASIS OF PITTSBURGH

1950 LOS ANGELES PILGRIMAGE

KENNETH F. MAY
Illustrious Potentate

Traveling via Burlington Route between Denver and Chicago

Steward of this dining car will gladly furnish souvenir copy of this menu if desired.

Breakfast

June 26, 1950

CHOICE OF:

Chilled Orange Juice

Chilled Cantaloupe

Chilled Tomato Juice

Stewed Prunes with Cream

Chilled Grapefruit Juice

Kadota Figs in Syrup

or

Cooked or Dry Cereal with Cream

CHOICE OF:

Sugar Cured Ham or Bacon with Two Eggs

Browned Corned Beef Hash with Poached Egg

Chipped Beef in Cream on Toast

Omelette with Strawberry Preserves

Dry or Buttered Toast

or

All Bran Muffins

Orange Marmalade

or

Jelly

Coffee

Tea

Cocoa

Postum

Milk

Sanka Coffee

THE DUDE RANCH - A typically American Institution

Out where the western plateaus billow upward to meet the snow-capped ramparts of the Rockies is the dude ranch country—as majestic, as rugged, and almost as primitive as when white man first beheld it.

Here is a different world—a world of horseflesh and leather, of boots and 10-gallon hats, of 50-mile vistas and mile-high mountains. Here is nature unspoiled and unspoilable. Here the dude and guest ranch thrives.

What is there to do on a dude ranch? Everyone has his favorite horse; gentle mounts for children and those who never straddled a saddle; fleet, spirited mounts for those who love to gallop over the prairie . . . all sure-footed for climbing mountain trails or fording swift streams. If you are a devotee of Isaac Walton, bait your hook and thrill to a lively tussle with a speckled mountain trout in an ice-cold stream. If you like to hike, there are countless seldom-used trails that lead through shaded valleys, alongside gem-like lakes, up to lofty heights where one can view nature at its best. Those who crave action can take a hand at wrangling horses, putting up hay, handling a branding iron, or roping a steer. Or, you can enjoy luxurious loafing beneath great trees or on a shady cabin porch; plunge into a cool pool; seek out a restful corner for an hour with your favorite book or an afternoon doze.

Here you'll find the keen mountain air . . . clear and exhilarating . . . a perfect antidote for backward appetites and jaded nerves. Worries and cares are forgotten; every day brings a new and utterly different experience.

Yes, the dude ranch is a typically American institution. The ranch regions in Wyoming, Montana and Colorado are served by fine Burlington air-conditioned trains.

