Portland, the City of Roses

Portland, the City of Roses, is the capital of the state and one of the most inviting of the many beautiful cities of the western coast. Embodying a spirit of growth and a sense of beauty, Portland is a place where young men of the nation can find the opportunity to satisfy their own peculiar tastes in this land of mountains ever beckoning. Each may at his own convenience find mountains and glaciers where one may climb to the edge of flower-borders now there in golf awaits you in Portland.

Portland is different from the industrial city, so it is known in the East. It is a port where rail and water meet at a logical point. Portland is 'different' from the fair play of the seven seas steam into the harbor; for there are sixty-five acres of cargo space; there are twenty-seven and a half miles of piers; twelve million-bushel grain elevators; three modern municipal terminals; two million-bushel grain elevators; and, perhaps most important, a port where rail and water meet at a logical point.

Portland is the capital of the state, as it is known in the East. Portland is one of the principal American Ports. It is one of the principal American ports and approximately 13 steamship lines have cleared. These ships represented 50 different routes to foreign ports. Today she is one of the great industrial centers as well as the largest freight ships on the Pacific. Portland to the sea is now wide and deep enough to accommodate any vessel, passenger or freighter, plying the Pacific. This is a port where rail and water meet at a logical point.

The growth of Portland's industrial activity has equalled those of her foreign trade. But Portland is different from the industrial city, as it is known in the East.
