Tacoma, the "Lumber Capital of America"

I left a city in the Northwest, fit for you and I, grace and love, in days to see. And blue days at sea.

TACOMA, Wash. Robert Louis Stevenson wrote: "Green days in November." The reason is simple: November marks the great days of the lumber trade. The streets are crowded, the business brisk. The wharves, the docks, teem with activity. The long, dark nights are brightened by the glow of the many factories. The sun sets late and rises early, and the days are usually warm and pleasant. The people are happy and contented, and the city thrives under the improving business conditions. The quality of the lumber produced in Tacoma is the best in the world, and the city is well-known for its fine furniture factories. Tacoma is a great city, and it will continue to grow. The future is bright for Tacoma, and we can look forward to many more years of progress and prosperity.

Lore of the Northwest
Blue days at sea. Never seen the ocean? The Northwest is a wonderful place to visit, with its beautiful scenery and friendly people. The Pacific Northwest is known for its stunning landscapes, from the vast forests to the rugged mountains. The coastline is dotted with charming towns and picturesque villages. The climate is mild and the people are friendly. There is plenty to do in the Northwest, whether you enjoy hiking, fishing, or simply relaxing on the beach. The Northwest is a great place to visit and explore, and you won't be disappointed.

Abundance of Water Power
For the city of Port Townsend, abundant water power is a great asset. The city is situated on the west side of the Puget Sound, and the abundant water power is a source of great wealth. The city is served by the Port Townsend Water Power Company, which operates a large power plant on the shores of the Sound. The power plant is a modern, efficient facility, and it provides the city with all the electricity it needs. The water power is a great asset for the city, and it is a source of great pride. The city is grateful to have such a wonderful resource, and it is sure to continue to enjoy its abundant water power for many years to come.

Tours to the City of Port Townsend, a Once-a-Century Event
The City of Port Townsend, on the west side of the Puget Sound, is the only city in the United States that is accessible by water power. The city is situated on the west side of the Sound, and the abundant water power is a source of great wealth. The city is served by the Port Townsend Water Power Company, which operates a large power plant on the shores of the Sound. The power plant is a modern, efficient facility, and it provides the city with all the electricity it needs. The water power is a great asset for the city, and it is a source of great pride. The city is grateful to have such a wonderful resource, and it is sure to continue to enjoy its abundant water power for many years to come.